ARCHBOLD RETORTS

"I AM NO LIAR," AND HE WANTS HE WILL ACT

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—John D. Archbold said, as he sailed today for Europe:

"I am not a liar. I am not accustomed to being so accused and will not endure the accusation lightly."

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 24.—Colonel Roosevelt is not disposed to take the stand before the Senate investigating committee on campaign contributions. The ex-President feels he has made ample explanation of his action with respect to the Standard Oil gift to the 1904 campaign fund. Roosevelt regards the investigation as nothing less than a "fishing excursion" to gather ammunition for the Democratic campaign this fall.

"ABSURD," SAYS THE COLONEL

Asked if he would consent to go before the Senate committee he replied:

"I answered that question three days ago in Whitehall. It is absurd to ask me to do so now."

GET FREE SEAT
AT BALL GAME

"Standing room only" is the watchword at "Pewee Park for the average fan these days. Holders of AMERICAN numbered tickets are asked to stand up, and the tickets which are being issued entitle the holder to a grand stand seat at any game, at any time during the season of 1911. The AMERICAN sport pages daily and compare the numbers printed with the numbers on the tickets. Tickets marked with a red "X" will not be good or redeemable when presented for numbers published previous to August 23. The number of tickets marked with a red "X" and the number so being printed daily are responded with the red X series now being distributed.

Each of the fifty numbers are printed in the early editions each day and fifty numbers are printed in the later editions each day.

Each is a duplicate of the number which is on the check you hold it printed in the "American," bring or send same to the Treasurer, Department "M," 1100 Broadway, New York, N. Y., for free tickets. You may use one of the Red not or Plurigen games on the tickets marked with a red "X" for the newsway for checks.

Senator Boies Penrose, Alias "Fanning," (in the Standard Oil Cipher Code.)

"I now come to the letter alleged to have been written to me by John D. Archbold, enclosing a certificate of deposit in my favor for $25,000, written under date of October 13, 1904. I have reason to believe that this letter is a forgery, and I shall denounce its production; BUT IT IS TRUE, AND AT THE TIME IT WAS WELL KNOWN THAT DURING THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN OF 1904 I DID RECEIVE SUCH A CONTRIBUTION FROM MR. ARCHBOLD FOR THE CAMPAIGN IN PENNSYLVANIA. THE CONTRIBUTION WAS A PART OF A MUCH LARGER ONE, WHICH I WILL NOW EXPLAIN."—From the speech of Boies Penrose in the Senate Wednesday.

Thus, out of his own mouth, Penrose convicts himself of being the legislative agent and the political paymaster of the Standard Oil Company. It is legal proof of a fact known to all well-informed men a long time that that crookedest of corporations traffics in statesmen as it traffics in petroleum, employing the same scientifically economical methods in each case.

Senator Penrose, for example, was the understudy of Aldrich. When Aldrich announced that he intended to retire, and buy paintings and bric-a-brac for the million-dollar home he has built out of his savings as Senator at five thousand dollars a year, the eyes of the directors of the Standard Oil were turned toward Penrose. Aldrich grew rich out of corporations while in public life.

Aldrich had served them faithfully. He had been amply rewarded. What was more natural than that an incentive should be given to Penrose, Aldrich's successor as the leader of the Republican party in the Senate, for like faithful service?

And so, while poor old Representative Grosvenor got certificates of deposit for $2,000, and Senator Forsaker for greater sums, the first payment to Penrose shown was $25,000, or five times his salary as Senator at that time. And Quay was only just dead and Aldrich not yet "retired."

Like Forsaker, Penrose admits that while a Senator of the United States he took Standard Oil money. Like Forsaker he will be retired to private life.

The charges that he makes against other men are unimportant. His "explanation" of what he did with the money is unimportant. His boast that with it he bought a majority of 500,000 for his ticket in Pennsylvania will find favor in the eyes of the directors of the Standard Oil Company only. What IS important is his blunt, brutal announcement that the money was sent to HIM, and that he, a United States Senator, acted FOR ARCHBOLD in distributing it for his own purposes and for those of the Standard Oil Trust.

Why did Archbold send Penrose this money? Cortelyou was chairman of the National Republican Committee. Bliss was its treasurer. Penrose was merely head of a State organization. Yet to him was entrusted not only the $25,000 for use in Pennsylvania, but the $100,000 for the national campaign. Plainly Penrose was the paymaster of the corporation. Plainly he was its political representative, its disarming agent, assigned the duty of placing the political investments where they would do the most good.

If, after Penrose's unblinking assertion that he handled the purse for the Standard Oil Company in 1904, any further proof of his relations with that corporation is required, observe his use of the Archbold telegram to Flinn. Not only was Penrose able to secure this document from the private files at No. 25 Broadway, but he was furnished that Standard Oil secret cipher code by which he translated it for the benefit of his brother Senators. AND OBSERVE FURTHER THAT IN THIS CODE THE WORD "FANNING" IS SET ESPECIALLY APART TO DESIGNATE PENROSE HIMSELF. When the Standard Oil Company honors a gentleman with a place in its code it is treating him like one of ITS CONFIDENTIAL EMPLOYEES.

Senator Forsaker, of Ohio, was treated in the same way, but only as long as he was in a position to be of use to Archbold and his crowd.

The Standard Oil Company has the same system in business and in politics. It is far more economical to employ political bosses for purchasing agents than to purchase votes or legislation direct. It pays better to hire United States Senators who are also political bosses than men who are merely the one or the other.

Following that policy of enlightened thrift which has made it the admiration of the business world, the Standard Oil Company picked its representatives wisely. In the hands of Penrose $25,000 would go a long way. From him a gift of a few hundred dollars to a candidate for Congress or to the Legislature would confer lasting obligation. From him a mere request to an aspiring legislator would be the equivalent of a thousand dollars spent by Archbold or one of his purely business representatives.

Thus into politics was introduced the system which produced the greatest business organization in the world. And, compared to the results achieved, the cost was ridiculously low.

Penrose, whose confession and its accompanying snarl of "you're another" to the men who have accused him, proves him to be utterly lacking in moral sense, and so he was an ideal servant of the Standard Oil Company.

But it is the master who profits by that kind of traffic, not the servant. Penrose is on his way to join Forsaker in political oblivion. Bailey is traveling the same road. And when they are gone and forgotten, Archbold will be seeking new purchasing agents unless real direct primaries and other measures advocated by sincere progressives end this moral rotteness by making it impossible for criminal corporations to buy bosses or legislation.

The tremendous value of the exposure of Penrose by the Hearst Magazine, and by its complete corroboration by Penrose himself is not that it sends a United States Senator to the disgraceful retirement he deserves. It is useful to show that a man is unfit for the office he holds, and to put him out of it, as Lorimer was put out of the Senate.

But it is far more useful to show that a corporation manager, in the words of Fred Landis at Chicago, can "carry concealed statements" as "Gyp the Blood" and other lesser criminals can carry concealed weapons. Penrose's forced confession will do more than drive him out of public life. It will help to drive the Standard Oil Company out of its traffic in public servants.

The American believes in government ownership of United States Senators and Representatives, and it rejoices that Penrose's unrighteous wrath has helped to bring this lesson home to all the people, not merely the readers of the AMERICAN, who have so long known it.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

AWAIT THE CAUSE OF THE FLY
Editor Boston AMERICAN:
Sir—While we are busy these days awaiting the fly, don't let us forget to await the cause of the fly. If it was possible—thank God it is not—to exterminate every fly in one great swirl, without removing what causes the fly the result would be pestilence.
So long as our sanitation is bad and we are careless in our disposal of garbage the fly is one of nature's wise provisions to turn pestilent matter into harmless matter.
In England and Europe, where they have been awaiting the cause of the fly for the last hundred years, an agent for fly screens would starve to death.
By all means await the fly, but we must also await the cause and await it hard or the back action will find a way we will not forget. Truly,
A. B. S.

THE WONDER-MAKER

COME, if thou'rt cold to Summer's charms
Her clouds of green, her starry flowers,
And let this bird, this wandering bird,
Make his fine wonder yours;
He, hiding in the leaves so green,
When sampling this fair world of ours,
Cries "Cuckee," clear; and, like Lot's wife,
I look, though it should end my life.
When I can hear that charmed one's voice
I taste of immortality;
My joy's so great that on my heart
Doth lie eternity,
As light as any little flower—
So strong a wonder works in me;
"Cuckoo!" he cries, and fills my soul
With all that's rich and beautiful.

Narragansett's Last Society Frolic the Most Daring Yet.

The Fancy Dress Ball at the Casino the Other Night Was the Most Amazing Thing of Its Kind Ever Held in This Country—or Elsewhere So Far as the Records Show.

Narragansett Pier had a FANCY DRESS BALL the other evening.
It was the most amazing thing of its kind ever held in this country.

It distanced all previous efforts of that bizarre resort.

It created a sensation.
A representative of the Sunday AMERICAN who attended the affair has considerable to say about it in tomorrow's AMERICAN.

His story of his experiences and observations will even interest blasé Newport. By comparison the recent fetes given by the Stuyvesant Fishes and the Cornelius Vanderbilts are indeed commonplace.

"It was the last word in society frolics," says the newspaper man who was there.

We take his word for it.

The mystic figure is 22,000.

Do you know what that means?

It means that one week from next Tuesday—the day after Labor Day—Allan M. Fletcher of Cavendish has got to be elected the Republican Governor of Vermont by at least 22,000 majority over all, or the Republicans are bound to lose the Presidency in November. So it has always been, the figures show, and so it must always be, the experts say.

It seems as plain as can be, today, that Mr. Fletcher will not get half of 22,000 majority this year, or say some—half of that, or half of that again.

Some say Mr. Fletcher will not have any majority at all.

We don't know about that, but we do know that the news of the Vermont situation will be more fully and more attractively set forth in the Sunday AMERICAN than in any other Sunday newspaper in New England. We mention this not only for the benefit of our friends in Vermont, but for that of all our readers in New England.

The revelations of corruption and graft in the New York police force, the exposures of the desperate methods of New York's gangs of gamblers and desperadoes of the underworld has startled the whole country.

COULD SUCH THINGS HAPPEN IN BOSTON!

No doubt when you have frequented the city's shadier spots, have read of the doings of so-called "men about town," perhaps have had some professional gambler or plunger pointed out to you, you have wondered what goes on in the city's darkest spots when the general public is not looking.

The recent Coleman-Big Bill Keliher case may have kindled the imagination.

The Sunday AMERICAN will tell the truth about the situation as it is today.

Did you ever notice that little group of pretty girls who may be seen almost any day up at the ball grounds occupying a box over near the Red Sox "dugout"?

Probably you've wondered who they are and why they are such constant attendants at the games.

Well, they are the REAL managers of the Red Sox boys. Mr. "Jake" Stahl may THINK he is manager, but when it comes right down to holding the reins over those Big Leaguers that group of pretty girls are the regular drivers.

They are the Red Sox Brides.
They are interesting personages and by rights should figure more in the baseball columns. Therefore the Sunday AMERICAN is going to have quite a little to say about them.

Incidentally these little ladies all agree on ONE subject, but have widely different views of most everything else. Of course you know what they AGREE on, but you surely won't know what they DISAGREE on unless you read Sunday's AMERICAN.

Proofs of the corrupt alliance between a criminal trust and crooked public men are shown in a double page of fac simile letters in the Sunday AMERICAN. These letters show the appalling domination of the great interests over National legislation.

The Daniel Blake Russell case continues uppermost in the public mind. WILL Dakota Dan succeed in proving himself the disputed heir? That is a question which cannot be answered as yet. But the Sunday AMERICAN will print a story of Dakota Dan and Fresno Dan which is of absorbing interest.

There have been strange and wonderful things at Newport this season. The leaders of fashionable—ultra-fashionable, the Society Editor would say—society have vied with each other in the bizarre fads and fascies.

But WHAT THESE SOCIETY WOMEN WEAR is probably of more interest to the women than the latest fashion plates from Paris. The Sunday AMERICAN will print numerous pictures, showing Newport fashion leaders in their latest creations.

And there are MANY OTHER THINGS which will interest you in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. SEE THAT YOUR NEWSDRINKER HAS ENOUGH AMERICANS ENGAGED IN ADVANCE TO SUPPLY YOU WITH YOUR COPY.
